

AUTO-ENROLMENT

The legal perspective

---

Auto-enrolment is not just about increased pension costs. It is also an opportunity to strategically assess how pensions fits into your overall reward strategy, and ensure that your pension arrangements remain fit for purpose and appropriate for your workforce.

Auto-enrolment: The basics

Auto-enrolment is the new duty on all UK employers to automatically enrol all employees who meet age and earnings criteria into a pension scheme that meets specific requirements and to make a minimum level of contributions to that scheme.

Who does this apply to?

All UK workers you employ. These fall into three categories: Entitled Workers; Non-eligible Jobholders and Eligible Jobholders. Which category an employee falls into will depend on their age and level of earnings which will change over time. Different duties apply to each category. A key preliminary step will be to assess your workforce to establish which category each employee falls into.

Age Earnings	16-21	22 - State Pension Age	State Pension Age - 74
Under lower earnings threshold (£5,668)*	Entitled worker	Entitled worker	Entitled worker
£5,668 to £9,440*	Non-eligible jobholder	Non-eligible jobholder	Non-eligible jobholder
Over earnings trigger for auto-enrolment (£9,440*)	Non-eligible jobholder	Eligible jobholder	Non-eligible jobholder

What are the key obligations?

What are the minimum contribution rates?

ALL WORKERS

- ▶ Provide with specific information
- ▶ Keep records for at least 6 years

ENTITLED WORKERS

- ▶ Allow to join a qualifying scheme
- ▶ No contributions required

JOBHOLDERS

Eligible Jobholders <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▶ Auto-enrol into qualifying scheme</li> <li>▶ Pay minimum contributions</li> <li>▶ Allow to opt-out</li> <li>▶ Re-enrol every 3 years</li> </ul>	Non-eligible Jobholders <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>▶ Allow to opt-in to qualifying scheme</li> <li>▶ Pay minimum contributions</li> <li>▶ Allow to opt-out</li> </ul>
--	---

For a defined contribution (DC) scheme these are 8% of a band of pay between £5,668 and £41,450*. At least 3% of which must come from the employer. These rates are to be phased in.

Most existing DC schemes do not use this band of earnings for pensionable pay purposes. There are three alternative quality tests you can use to certify an existing DC scheme meets the requirements based on different definitions of pensionable pay. This may mean the total minimum contributions required are higher (9% where only basic pay is pensionable) or lower (7% where all earnings are pensionable).

When does this apply?

The requirements start to apply from 1 October 2012. They apply to different employers from different dates (your "Staging Date"), depending on the size of your PAYE scheme. By 1 July 2013 all employers with a PAYE scheme of 3000+ must comply.

Where can I provide these benefits?

The key strategic decision is what pension scheme or schemes to use for auto-enrolment. Do you use an existing scheme or move to a new arrangement? See the table on page 4 for further information on the options.

You must use a "qualifying scheme". If this is DC it must have a default investment option and have an appropriate charging structure.

Auto-enrolment: Key legal issues

Below is a sample of some of the questions you will consider as part of your auto-enrolment project planning and implementation and some of the related legal issues arising. If any of these affect your business and you are interested in more detailed information please contact us.

When will auto-enrolment apply to my business?

There are prescribed dates from which the requirements apply but be aware of the impact of:

- ▶ group PAYE arrangements
- ▶ the effect of paying pensioners through PAYE

These may mean the requirements apply to you earlier than you think
Consider the options for deferral of the obligations if you have an open defined benefit (DB) scheme in the group

Which employees will be covered?

- ▶ All “eligible jobholders”, even high earners with enhanced / fixed protection
- ▶ Consider the position of consultants, agency workers and secondees
- ▶ Be aware of mobile and overseas employees who may still be covered
- ▶ Identify “problem” employees e.g. those on zero hours contracts and high earners and agree how these are to be dealt with
- ▶ Consider employees with fluctuating earnings and when the duty will arise

What scheme(s) should I use?

- ▶ See the table overleaf for more detailed comparison of the types of scheme that may be used
- ▶ In terms of whether to use a single scheme i.e. “One size fits all” approach or different schemes consider
  - Low paid vs higher paid employees
  - Harmonisation opportunities and risks
  - Discrimination issues- e.g. potential age discrimination risks if different contribution rates are to be provided
  - Need for changes to contractual terms?

To avoid the complexities of the different categories of employee can we just auto enrol everyone?

Issues include:

- ▶ Unlawful deduction from wages- the exemption which allows for this only applies where there is a legal requirement to auto-enrol
- ▶ Complexity in relation to refund of contributions if an employee for whom there is no legal duty to auto enrol wishes to opt out

How might the ban on inducements to opt out of an auto enrolment scheme impact on the business?

- ▶ If you have high earners who are offered the option of cash in lieu of pension
- ▶ If you have employees in individual arrangements
- ▶ If you have a flexible benefit structure in place

Don't get caught out by a legal issue when implementing the new auto-enrolment requirements. Build in time at the planning stages to consider these so that your arrangements meet your overall strategic and reward objectives in a way you can be confident does not give rise to additional legal risk or compliance issues for your business.

Can I just use an existing scheme for auto-enrolment purposes?

This is possible but the following would need to be considered:

- ▶ Does it require amendment?
- ▶ Is trustee consent to amend required and what documentation will be necessary to make the amendment legally effective?
- ▶ Is there a need for employee consultation?
- ▶ Are there any contractual risks with the changes proposed? - undertake a review of employees' contracts, particularly if there is to be a "levelling down" of benefits
- ▶ Will the proposed structure create any future debt on employer risks e.g. where a DC section is to be added on to an existing DB scheme

What things do I need to consider if I want to use an existing DC scheme for auto-enrolment?

- ▶ The definition of pensionable pay
- ▶ The eligibility criteria, enrolment and opt out provisions
- ▶ Whether the current charging structure is compliant
- ▶ Do the rules allow for the use of the 3 month waiting period
- ▶ The default investment option
- ▶ If salary sacrifice is currently operated is this in a way that is compliant with auto-enrolment obligations

What are the cost implications for my business?

An assessment and review of the increase in pension contribution costs and other costs associated with implementation will need to be carried out. As part of this it will be necessary to consider the cost impact of different take up levels. This analysis will feed into the decisions taken as to the contribution structure for the auto enrolment scheme and any changes required. This in turn may lead to a broader review of the overall reward package

Is there any impact if we acquire employees via a TUPE transfer?

Yes, consideration needs to be given to the separate requirements that apply to provide a minimum 6% matching contribution in a DC scheme for certain employees on a TUPE transfer.

- ▶ The contribution structure should be "TUPE - proofed" as much as possible
- ▶ Transfers to and from employers with different "staging dates" should be addressed

Are there any legal issues when I am looking at my payroll capability?

A detailed review of your payroll system will be required to assess whether it can cope with the new requirements and what changes are required to the system. Legal / contractual protections need to be considered where payroll is outsourced given the increased risk of errors or breaches occurring
